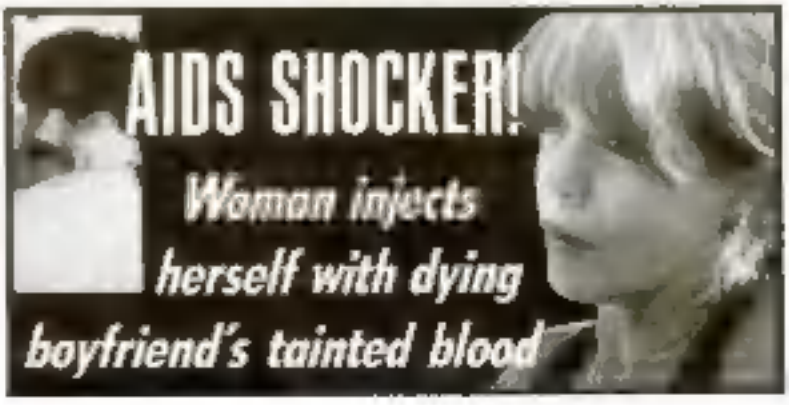
GET FAT AS A PIG & FEEL FIT AS A FIDDLE . . . say experts



TORTURED Anna Resnick, 75, points to the porch railing her attacker climbed over. He raped and beat her — and left a legacy of medical bills from his injuries. She has received only $27.81 from a state victim's compensation fund.

RAPE VICTIM'S OUTRAGE!

Florida widow gets measly $27 from state compensation fund

In a slap that staggers the senses, five years after she was raped and tortured, Anna Resnick, 75, finally got a victim's compensation check — for the insulting amount of $27.81!

"I don't know what in the world I'm going to do with all that money," the gutsy widow told The NEWS. "Maybe I can take a trip to Europe or travel across America. I'd like to think about it," she added sarcastically.

By DICK DONOVAN
Staff writer

Well, in most stores the money would buy her a carton of cigarettes and leave a little left over for maybe a Big Mac and a bag of fries.

But it sure as hell won't begin to pay the mountain of medical bills she was buried under when a worthless, knife-wielding slime bag broke into her Fort Lauderdale home to rape her.

And then there's the fear and anguish she's had to live with ever since that horrible day that somehow always seems like just yesterday. That's a personal agony every rape victim carries deep down inside.

persevered. The indignity she endured. The terror she still lives with. The bills she had to pay. Florida's Bureau of Crime Compensation and Victim Witness Services sent her a check . . . for a lousy $27.81.

What Anna Resnick doesn't like to think about is how, at 2 o'clock on the morning of March 25, 1980, a gutless punk broke into her apartment, grabbed her from behind and whispered the words that would haunt her sleep for the rest of her life . . . "Don't turn around. I've got a knife!"

"I started crying," she recalled. "I told him I had a bladder infection and that I had to go to the doctor at 10 o'clock. He said he would torture me until 10. Then he hit me in the face with his purse. Then he raped me . . . he raped me twice. Then he stole my money and my jewelry. He hasn't been caught yet."

The creep left Anna bleeding and bruised from her face to her chest. Those were the injuries that a medical doctor could easily treat.

But it took a psychiatrist and therapists to handle the emotional injuries . . . the emotional wounds that are with her still.

And for all her pain and suffering, and the inner terror that remains her constant companion, some insensitive bureaucratic mastermind sent her a compensation check for $27.81.

Tasty dishes selling like HOTCAKES!

CHEF SERVES UP MEALS MADE FROM RATS

Unsuspecting tourists wolfing 'em down!

By JOE SIMON
Staff writer

Shifty chef Zhang Guoxun serves up the most scrumptious dish kabobs, stews and stir fries in town, and unsuspecting tourists shell out big bucks to wolf them down — not realizing that every dish is made from big, juicy rats!

"Just look at those idiots. They line up for blocks to get into that place," flabbergasted traffic cop Liu Ting-kun told a reporter in Canton, China.

"Most of them are Americans and Europeans — and if they only knew what they were eating, I'm sure they would all get very, very sick."

Crafty Zhang, 43, opened his outrageous eatery six months ago after a fateful encounter in a garbage-strewn alleyway.

"I'd been trying to think of some exotic new restaurant I could run, with dishes that no one else would dare to serve," he recalled.

"Then one night I was walking through an alley and a big, screeching rat ran out in front of me. He looked so yummy, I knew at once I'd found the answer to my prayers.

"I figured I could make all kinds of delicious things out of rat meat — and I sure couldn't find anything cheaper, could I?"

And by 10 a.m., sweat-soaked cooks are turning the ratty-pelty rodents into everything from rack of rat to rat potpies.

"We have more wonderful delicacies than you could shake a stick at," said the rascally restaurateur. "Have you ever tried rat casserole with mushrooms, or rat with chestnuts and duck or rats wrapped in lotus leaves?

"Our customers give us compliments on all our dishes. They know there is nothing like a romantic rat dinner — and if they get an occasional rat hair in their teeth, we always provide them with toothpicks."

But you won't find the word "rat" anywhere on menu at Zhang's swank bistro. Instead, the wily businessman calls the destroying little critters "super deer" — so dinghat tourists won't know what they're tucking into.

"Rat meat is really very good for you," insists the shameless chef. "If you are bald, you eat rat and your hair will grow back.

"If you are impotent, you eat rat and your virility will come back.

"But we don't call them rats, because there are some people who wouldn't enjoy their dinner if we told them they were eating rat with oyster sauce."

Golfer speared by 8-iron!

An angry golfer broke his 8-iron against a tree after duffing a shot and nearly killed one of his friends when a piece of the club shaft ricocheted into his skull.

Trucking company owner Dick Pearce, 39, underwent emergency surgery to remove a foot-long piece of the club from his right temple.

"It was touch and go for a while, but he's going to recover and won't suffer any permanent brain damage," said Hamilton, Ontario, Canada, Police Sgt. Bob Burk.

Pearce and three of his golfing buddies, whose identities were not released, were on the Par-3 16th tee of King's Forest Golf Club when the incident occurred.

"One of Pearce's pals lost his temper after duffing the shot and banged his 8-iron against a tree," Sgt. Burk said. "The club broke and a chunk of the shaft speared Pearce."

Mark Hadley said he was the most evil I've ever heard in my life."

The crown attorney could still file criminal charges against the golfer who lost his temper. "The victim and his friends were all members of the club and played at least once a week," said Sgt. Burk. "I hear it was totally out of character for him to wrap a Patient killed by blood cooked in microwave oven like a baked potato!

By DICK DONOVAN

Norma Levitt's hip surgery came off without a hitch. But a simple blood transfusion killed her — because the blood had been cooked in a coffee shop microwave oven!

"The blood was put in (the microwave) and turned three times, like a baked potato," claimed Tulsa, Okla., attorney Bill Wilkinson.

Wilkinson is handling a $30 million suit the dead woman's husband and daughters have filed against Tulsa's Hillcrest Medical Center, where Mrs. Levitt died. In a sworn deposition, surgical nurse Christine R. Jones said that before transfusing a unit of blood into her 75-year-old patient, she instructed that it be warmed in a microwave in the staff coffee room.

Blood is routinely warmed in a special heater to avoid causing the recipient to go into shock. In her sworn statement, Mrs. Jones said using the warming unit would have required more time, equipment and personnel.

To avoid that, hospital scrub technician DeLaine Johnson said he was told to heat the blood for four minutes in the microwave and "turn it three times" during the process.

The improper "warming" of the blood damaged the red blood cells and raised its potassium content to a deadly level, charges the suit.

Potassium is the main chemical in the lethal injections some states use to execute condemned killers. It stops the heartbeat.

And that's what evidently happened to Mrs. Levitt. The lethal blood sent her into immediate cardiac arrest.

According to Wilkinson, the hospital tried to cover up the real cause of death by telling the family Mrs. Levitt had died of a blood clot. "The hospital never told the family of the microwave incident," the attorney charged.

He said the family learned the truth about two weeks later when the surgeon made inquiries, discovered what had really happened and notified them.

The coroner's office — which hadn't been told the blood had been warmed in a microwave when an autopsy was performed — listed Mrs. Levitt's death as an accident resulting from "the effects of hemolyzed (damaged) blood."

Incredibly, in her sworn deposition, Mrs. Jones — trained to examine blood for dangerous abnormalities — said she noticed a discoloration "the size of a quarter" on the blood Mrs. Levitt was to receive.

She conceded that the spot indicated that "some of the blood may have been too warm," but felt it wasn't serious enough not to use.

Unfortunately for Norma Levitt, the nurse was wrong.

World's most prolific mother expecting 65th

THIS gal's an AMATEUR compared to THIS woman

Mother of all Moms gives birth to 77 kids

ABOVE: Chilean woman announced her 65th pregnancy — but she's NOT the world's top mom.

BELOW: TOP MOM Clemencia Soto and hubby Luan, circled, show off 17 of their 53 living children.

. . . & now she's expecting TWINS!

By BEATRICE DEXTER
(special correspondent)

The world press went berserk recently when a woman from Chile announced she was pregnant with her 65th child. But the mom-to-be has nothing on Clemencia Soto — she's working on numbers 78 and 79!

The mega-mum has given birth every year for 38 years — and already has had an incredible total of 77 children!

The 54-year-old woman has produced one set of quintuplets, multiple sets of quadruplets, triplets, and twins and numerous single births since she married at the tender age of 15.

Eleven died at birth and another 14 died of illness or accidents, but her house still teems with 53 children ranging from 1 to 39 — and last month she found out she's expecting twins!

"My husband Luan said I believe that a big family is precious in the eyes of God," says Clemencia, a plump, dark-eyed housewife who claims more children than the Catholic church says it's OK to have.

"It's expensive to maintain them, but they're worth every penny.

"There's always plenty of older kids around to help with the babies, so it isn't that much work after you've had your first dozen or so."

The Sotos live on a 25-acre farm near Las Pizanas, Argentina. Their older children — many of whom are married with kids of their own — live with them. At planting and harvesting time, the children also have jobs off the farm to help support the mega-family.

The 54 Sotos crowd together under one gigantic roof, sharing 13 bedrooms, a large living room, a huge kitchen and nine tiny bathrooms. But not one of the family complains about the sardine-can conditions they live in.

"To me, having a lot of family around is natural," says the super-mom.

"And being pregnant is natural, too.

"Sometimes I'm sick and tired of being pregnant and I'm not expecting I actually feel sick."

Clemencia and Luan, a 37-year-old store clerk, say they have never used birth control to avoid more kids.

And they say they're delighted to be expecting again because there's always room for more. "We're both healthy and we love each other," said Luan. "So we'll keep on having kids until we get too old.

"Then we're going to sit back and let the kids we cared for care for us in our final

Human torch breathes fire for jury to beat DWI rap!

By JACK ALEXANDER
Staff writer

Police charged Paul Domenech with drunk driving when they smelled alcohol on his breath, but he beat the rap by convincing an amused jury he was a performing fire breather.

"I had just auditioned for a TV show and was driving home when an officer pulled me over to the curb," said the part-time trucker from Tampa, Fla.

Police Sgt. Bill Fairbanks said Domenech's truck swerved from one lane to another and he smelled strongly of alcohol.

"I explained the smell was a mixture of rubbing alcohol and gasoline used in my fire-breathing act, but he gave me a ticket anyway," Paul told The NEWS. The talented trucker said he hasn't had a drink of booze in 10 years, but "if I watched in a Breathalyzer after a performance it would make that machine go crazy."

Paul, 34, went outside the courthouse in Tampa to perform for the jury during the drunk driving trial.

As the jurors watched he took a swig of the alcohol-gasoline cocktail, held a torch in one hand and blew a ball of fire.

SHOCKER

Cannibals eat missionary — & his entire family

Man, wife & 3 kids turned into stew meat by hungry savages!

By JOE BERGER
Staff writer

PORT MORESBY, New Guinea — Ill-fated missionary Newton Day was so determined to tame a tribe of Satanic cannibals that he dragged his terrified wife and kids into the steamy jungles of New Guinea — where ecstatic savages promptly ate them all!

Wild-eyed Tusari tribesmen turned the preacher, his pretty wife Pauline and their three children into a blood-curdling feast just hours after they arrived at the tribal camp, authorities said.

"We warned that man not to go in there — and especially not to take a bunch of little kids with him," said shocked missionary investigator Ilo Kaiap. "But the Tusaris don't want anybody preaching God to them. They're perfectly happy worshiping the Devil and eating any unsuspecting white man who comes along.

"Those people eye a white man the way most of us eye a nice, juicy steak."

Slave Newton, 40, was the self-ordained minister of his own church in suburban Melbourne, Australia, late last year when he read about the Satanic Tusaris and decided to convert them to Christianity.

"Never became obsessed with the idea of saving their souls," said his heartsick sister-in-law Andrea Starke.

"When he said he was packing up the family and going to New Guinea with Pauline and their children — Paulette, 12, Alicia, 11, and Sara, 4 — I thought he was crazy. I begged him not to go. We said there was no reason to risk those babies' lives like that, but he said the cannibals would love his kids and that would make his job just that much easier."

So steel-nerved Newton flew to New Guinea with Pauline and their children — Paulette, 12, Alicia, 11, and Sara, 4 — into the heart of the sweltering, bug-infested jungle.

"Our sources in neighboring tribes say the preacher and his family were dead and in the stewpot before he even got his Bible out of his duffel bag," Detective Dobu said. "The Tusaris ate like kings and danced all night long."

NEW DISCOVERY!

Eases the agony of Arthritis with a new non-prescription pill!

An astonishing new food concentrate eases the agony of arthritis in up to 65 percent of patients who try it, says top arthritis specialist.

Mrs. Hazel Hatch was the no longer needs pain medication now that she's taking sea cucumber preparation.

By Henry Weber

The product, called SeaCure, is derived from a shellfish like marine animal, the sea cucumber, and is now available without a prescription.

Nobody knows how the preparation works. But studies conducted in Australia and America have shown them to be safe and surprisingly effective in easing the pain of rheumatoid arthritis and osteoarthritis, two of the most devastating forms of joint disease.

"The product is definitely worth a try," said Dr. Mort Schwarzberg, director of rheumatology at Jersey Shores Medical Center in Neptune, N.J.

"It has few if any side effects. It's nontoxic. It's available without prescription. And tests show that it can have a beneficial effect in relieving the symptoms of rheumatoid arthritis and osteoarthritis.

"I would like to see more rigorous studies to isolate the active ingredient. Meanwhile, it's nice to have something so promising and safe for arthritis patients to try.

"I recommend it to my own patients."

In an eye-opening study, Dr. Schwarzberg found that seven of 11 or 64 percent of patients with osteoarthritis reported a reduction of pain and greater freedom of movement after using SeaCure.

Seven of 11 or 64 percent of patients with rheumatoid arthritis said the same.

Dr. McPhillips found that 11 of 22 patients with rheumatoid disease reported better mobility and reduced pain after they started taking SeaCure along with the prescription medications they were already using.

"Many of the patients were satisfied that there was a significant improvement in their arthritic symptoms," said Dr. McPhillips. "And while I would not suggest that it replace conventional medications, it may be used in addition to them with good effect and seemingly with a low risk of adverse reactions.

"I conducted the study to prove that the product was bogus but I simply couldn't do it," he continued.

"It does seem to have a beneficial effect in many patients and in my opinion it is something every arthritic sufferer might do well to try."

SeaCure is actually nothing more than a highly concentrated form of the sea cucumber, a marine animal that has been eaten throughout the South Pacific for hundreds of years.

Australia's Pacific Pharmaceuticals began to market the preparation after a relative of director Stan Grant found that eating a soup made from sea cucumber relieved the symptoms of his arthritis.

In the United States, arthritis victim Eleanor Runnels suffered crippling arthritis in her fingers and knees until she saw an advertisement for the product and tried it.

"After a severe reaction I was taken off prescription medications as I had nothing for my arthritis," said Mrs. Runnels of Buffalo, N.Y.

"The pain in my knees and fingers was so bad that I could hardly walk or hold anything in my hands. After using SeaCure the pain almost vanished.

"I would recommend it to anyone who suffers from arthritis pain."

Jeanne Kaagland of West Palm Beach, Fla., had such a severe case of arthritis that she couldn't lift groceries or turn over in bed.

"SeaCure has changed my life," she said. "After taking it for eight months I'm actually bowling with a 10-pound ball."

Dashiel Harper of Brooklyn, N.Y., tried cortisone and five other prescription medications for her arthritis and even had surgery on one of her crippled knees.

But she continued to agony until she started using SeaCure.

"It seems hard to believe but I am no longer suffering," said Miss Harper. "The stiffness in my knees is gone. I feel great."

Doctors told Mary Flack of Toms River, N.J., that she would have to take pain pills and have cortisone injections for the rest of her life just to be able to walk.

She tried SeaCure with near miraculous results.

"I started feeling better in just four days," she continued. "I haven't had a cortisone injection in over a month.

"But the most significant change in my life is the total cessation of pain medication and reduction of arthritic medication from 300 milligrams to 50 milligrams. I plan to make SeaCure a daily part of my life."

Arthritis victim Harry Mulinaff, 51, of Clearbrook, N.J., added: "I've been suffering for many years with pain and stiffness in my legs and knees and had to give up walking. After taking SeaCure I'm able to ride a bike and walk two to three miles every day without pain. I can't live without it."

This product does not take the place of arthritis medications prescribed by your doctor, and you should check with your physician before using SeaCure or any other medication for arthritis pain.

Hubby divorces wife for wearing gobs of jewelry 24 hours a day!

MR. JUST couldn't take it anymore! Husband Sammy Solis, above, put up with his wacky wife's hoards for two years before kicking her out.

By JOE BERGER
Staff writer

Plastered hubby Sammy Solis gave his wacky wife Hilda the boot after she draped 15 pounds of dime-store jewelry around her neck and refused to take it off — even when they made whoopee!

"She wore that junk for two straight years, and frankly I just couldn't take it anymore," groaned sad-sack Sammy, 50.

"You don't know what hell is till you've made love to a woman with a tiara and a ball of trinkets on her chest.

"Finally I said either the jewelry goes or you go — and the next day she was gone."

The heavy tale begins in late 1985 when rare-brained Hilda got a gold chain and matching bracelet as a birthday gift from her son in Las Vegas.

"They weren't expensive or anything, but they certainly were beautiful," the maternity lady told a tiffanies court in Vienna, Austria.

"I'd never worn any jewelry in my life, but everybody told me how good that stuff looked on me.

"After that, I got obsessed away and started buying all kinds of stuff and wearing it all at the same time.

"I guess it looked pretty silly, but I got addicted. The jewelry got me a lot of attention and it was the first time I'd gotten any attention in years, so it made me feel real good."

Within months, the slingbet insurance agent had dosed more than 15 pounds of baubles, bangles and beads — and was wearing them day and night. "It was totally crazy," Sammy said with a sigh.

"She wouldn't even take that junk off when she took a shower.

"It was so heavy she walked around kinda all bunched over and the doctor said the ear really messing up her neck and back so bad he would have to put her in traction if she didn't stop wearing it.

"She even started wearing it in bed. She'd sleep with it on and roll around on it and it would dig into her skin and leave marks.

"I told her to take it off, but she refused. She said it was her security blanket.

"Then one night in bed she rolled over on top of me and I thought I was going to suffocate from all the junk around her neck.

"I couldn't turn around without seeing all those chains and things staring me in the face, and I knew I had to do something drastic.

"I tried to reason with her, but she refused to take it off

Hollywood's wealthiest women didn't get rich by being nice — and the wealthiest gal of them all is . . . surprise, surprise. Amy Irving, ex-wife of director Steven Spielberg.

The 97 million smackers Amy squeezed out of Stevie when the couple split in 1989 easily surpasses the fortunes of Jane, Madonna, Barbra and Goldie, says celeb reporter Patricia Nolan.

Barbra Streisand is worth $50 million. But she paid author Lil. Singer a flat fee for the rights to his short story Vocal Singer didn't see a cent of the windfall profits Streisand made on the movie version of his story.

MIA THE QUEEN: Charles Bronson is still very close to his wife

Charles Bronson and Jill Ireland are inseparable — EVEN AFTER HER DEATH!

Macho movie man Charles Bronson was deeply hit about the loss of the love of his life — wife Jill Ireland's death more than a year ago.

"All his wife's clothes are still hanging in her closet. All her jewelry is where she left it. The house remains the way she decorated it," said Bronson.

But time has healed some wounds and Charles recalls joking with Jill about what to do with her ashes.

"I'll get a hollow cane and fill up the cane with your ashes, and carry it around. Then you'll always be with me." But the volume of ashes was much more than you could put into a cane." So Bronson came up with a touching alternative.

"I had a glass cylinder made for them, and I have two photographs on each side. They're placed on a bedside table. So when I'm there, it's there." — London Express

POOR MOM WANTS TO SELL HER HEART

. . . so her three kids won't starve to death!

WORRIED MOM Zena Bikit says a heart for life for her kids

By DICK DONOVAN

Knowing it will put her in her grave, dirt-poor mom Zena Bikit is offering her healthy heart to anyone who needs it — if her three children will be fed, clothed and cared for after she's gone!

"Every day I see my babies getting hungry because I have no money to buy even scraps of food," the healthy 30-year-old Russian mother told a reporter who visited her one-room hovel in a Moscow ghetto apartment.

"It was a hard decision to be made. But I have no other way out. I live alone with my children and I feel terrible thinking about their future.

"They are always hungry and not nourishing food only rarely. They have no clothes to wear, except old rags. So I will gladly give my heart to anyone who needs it, if that person will see to it that my babies have a better life than I am able to give them."

The desperate mom made her offer in a letter to the Russian Communist Party newspaper Pravda. But a suspicious editor believed the offer was phony and sent a reporter to investigate.

The understaffed reporter gave this account of his visit to the Bikits' tiny one-room apartment:

"There was no furniture — nothing at all in the room, which was utterly disrupted. There wasn't a bed, just even a mattress. They obviously slept on the floor.

"In the center of the room stood a small broom. The mother had made it from a stick and some straw. It was like a toy, yet the floor was spotlessly clean.

"The mother stood quietly while I was there. She answered my questions in a determined voice, but understandably. She was exhausted and clearly was a woman who had once enjoyed a better life.

"Her children were quiet and well-behaved. They squatted on the floor — a seven-year-boy and a younger girl with a baby sleeping in her lap. They looked like they hadn't had a decent meal in quite a long time. I couldn't detect even the smell of food in the room.

"What I saw made me feel sad. And I couldn't help admiring the courage of this woman — this desperate mother who would so unselfishly surrender her life to assure a better future for her children."

The reporter said he doesn't know what will become of the brave mother or her children, but he said she will not be allowed to donate her heart as long as she is alive.

Caterpillar fails test

If Mother Nature had done a better job when she built caterpillars, they would get more miles per leaf and do far less damage to farm crops.

Researchers have established that caterpillars require up to five times as much food to move their bodies a given distance than a creature possessing an internal skeleton.

Dr. Timothy Casey had the bright idea of testing caterpillar locomotion to measure their energy consumption. He concluded that caterpillars are inefficient, getting just one-eighth from their diet of leaves. Dr. Casey of Rutgers University found that caterpillars used their energy in a comparable rate to creatures

MY AMERICA
By ED ANGER

I'm madder than a pig at a barbecue over the latest shenanigans by a band of militant vegetarians — who actually launched a cream pie attack on Iowa's Pork Queen!

The gang of fruitcake animal lovers stormed into the World Pork Expo in Des Moines squealing about how Americans shouldn't eat bacon, ham or racks of ribs.

Then one of these ding-a-lings dressed as a pig suit charged pretty Pork Queen Dalrina Jellings and smacked her in the face with a non-dairy cream pie, for crying out loud!

If the good Lord didn't want us to eat pork chops, He wouldn't have given us hogs sharp teeth, now would He? If these pulled-pig protesters get their way, we'll all be eating bananas and sunflower seeds. The backyard cookout is a basic American right passed down from the Pilgrims and the Indians who used to roam this great land.

Hey, I think baby piglets are as cute as buttons, but let's face it — NOBODY who gets a whiff of sizzling juicy chops sizzling on the grill worries about how cute pigs are. All we care about is how they taste.

And what about the all-American tradition of the Christmas ham?

If these bleeding-heart ruminants have their way, we'll all be eating asparagus crowned on the centerpiece of our holiday feasts.

But what makes me so pig-fisting mad is that these hippie vegetarian prats don't seem to see that eating pork would make you smarter and also lean, by gum.

I'm living proof of that.

And I make it a point to eat a plate of pork at least twice a week, whether I want it or not. Hate to say it kids but I'd eat Porky Pig if I had the chance.

And I'm healthy as a horse, according to our family physician.

So let's keep that bacon sizzling and those pork chops frying.

And here's a little warning for those anti-meat fanatics: Keep your little trouble-seeker out of my backyard cookout — or you'll be next on the menu!

When I was a boy, one of our favorite meals was ham hocks and hotdogs. In fact, Grandma Anger, God rest her soul, used to say that eating pork would make you smarter and she was right, by gum.

I'm living proof of that.

And I make it a point to eat a plate of pork at least twice a week, whether I want it or not. Hate to say it kids but I'd eat Porky Pig if I had the chance.

Here are the results of Ed's last Pork poll:

A staggering 100 percent of readers agree that Charlton Heston is a pig. The monster who dressed his 6-year-old son with tomatoes and cut him up like a pig, should be locked in jail.

Only 4 percent of readers agree that Michelle is America's best lady singer since Patti Page. Ninety-four percent think of her as the worst piece of trash ever to hit America's airwaves.

Eighty-nine percent of readers agree that President Bush is an idiot if he trusts our bankrupt Soviet enemy with a big aid package. Eleven percent would turn him to send the cash and pay First Lady Raisa a big bonus.

Ninety-seven percent of readers agree that the U.S. should go all out to launch a $50 billion stash of gold and platinum that's now orbiting the sun and bring it back to Earth before the Japanese get it. Three percent believe we should let the Japanese have it.

ED ANGER'S PORK POLL

☐ YES: I agree with Ed Anger that pork tastes good and it's our American right to eat it any time we want! And those vegetarian protesters should be thrown in jail.

☐ NO: The only pig that should end up on the grill is Ed Anger and anybody who eats pork is sick, sick, sick!

Drunk wakes up with a parrot!

Hard-drinking Michael Autry woke up one morning after a wild night on the town and found two gerbils, a parrot and a pair of burglars in his bedroom!

The poor guy had no idea where he got the critters, so he let them go and stopped by the police station in Montreal, England, to report his bizarre experience.

But officers had already arrested the two burglars for breaking into a pet shop a few hours earlier.

"My client greatly regrets his imbecility in consuming so much alcohol," said the man's lawyer. "He has no recollection of the burglary.

"But considering the extent to which his mind was befuddled with drink, this is of little surprise."

HEALTH TIPS from the STARS

America's superpsychic, Countess Sophia Sabak, knows the stars control more than romance and finances — they determine who gets sick and who stays well. Here, she offers some sage advice to help us build on our strengths and guard against weaknesses that can keep us under the weather.

ARIES
March 21 - April 20

Aries rules the head, brain and eyes. This fire sign is full of energy and so it's quite rare to find a fat Arian.

But the willful Arian can be prone to irritability and migraine headaches.

Also, your health could suffer if you don't occasionally slow down.

The key to living as a healthy Arian is to channel all your constructive energy constructively and take time out every once in a while.

TAURUS
April 20 - May 20

Taureans are silver-tongued rulers of the dumplings of the universe, so you may think the stomach ruled this sign.

But no — Taurus is associated with the tongue, neck and throat. Sore throats could plague you.

Taurus is also connected with the thyroid gland, which controls the metabolism. The gourmets of the zodiac, Taureans will always be prone to weight gain.

GEMINI
May 21 - June 20

Fingers, hands, arms, shoulders, lungs and the nervous system are associated with Gemini.

They live by their wits and have a fragile inquisitive mind.

Geminis hate keeping still and being all in too boring — they find it hard to stay in bed for very long.

For this reason the always active twins may be plagued with a cold that won't go away. But a case of the sniffles doesn't have to slow them down. Try simple breathing exercises to relax, stay in bed and you'll be quicker to recover your health and conserve your high energy level.

CANCER
June 21 - July 22

Cancer rules the stomach and breasts.

Like the Taurean, the Cancerian craves food.

They treat a good meal as a replacement for love. Cancerians are also prone to eating disorders and would do well to monitor their drinking. Watch out — Cancer is an emotional sign. You are susceptible to depression.

The first symptom of a problem in a relationship and your trusty crabpack tells you. Wary Cancerians might try swimming as stay fit.

LEO
July 23 - August 22

The back and heart are tagged with Leos and this sign tends to suffer from back complaints.

Leos are highly active and they don't always put their health first.

Any athletic form of self-expression, such as dancing, swimming, jogging or aerobics, will help keep heart or back problems at bay.

VIRGO
August 23 - Sept. 22

Finicky. Fussy. Virgos are linked to the intestines and liver. These highly critical people like to create a sense of order, and this results in them becoming terribly nervous.

Stomachaches, indigestion and heartburn are all ailments that can cause major problems for a Virgo.

They get so overtired up trying to get things "just so" that they can make themselves very ill. Virgos are probably already a part of their life.

If not, they should start a ... progress now.

LIBRA
Sept. 23 - Oct. 22

The sign of the scales, ruling the two kidneys. Librans are always attempting to balance their lives, weighing up various decisions. This can lead to anxiety and stress. They may turn to food and drink in a bid to escape, causing decision making.

But Librans are very often blessed with a high metabolism.

Exercises that require balancing the mind and body such as yoga may help them to re-adjust harmony.

SCORPIO
Oct. 23 - Nov. 20

Scorpios are one of the sexiest signs of the zodiac and are associated with the love areas.

Their intensity in relationships can sometimes lead to sexual tension and a build-up of toxins in the body.

As obsessive signs, they can also be extreme when it comes to food, drink or drugs. With Scorpios it's usually all or nothing, and the best way ... is moderation.

SAGITTARIUS
Nov. 22 - Dec. 21

Sagittarians do everything excessively, including eating and drinking. Their boundless energy can also ruin the ... pursuits way if they don't feel things are going well.

By spreading energy evenly rather than releasing it in sports, health and happiness will surround them. Those born under the sign of the archer need to spend a great deal of time outdoors.

CAPRICORN
Dec. 23 - Jan. 19

Because they can be so rigid and routine-oriented Capricorns are associated with skin, bones and knees.

Serious and striving, they can spend long periods at work with little regard for their health.

Capricorns do recover, but only as a means to an end. They will need to ...

AQUARIUS
Jan. 20 - Feb. 18

On-the-go Aquarians need to make sure they don't accidentally sprain an ankle or pull a muscle trying.

This sign is linked with the heavy lifter, and they must be careful when exercising. New Age therapies, such as crystals, herbs and massage, suit go-go-ing Aquarians.

They are also idealistic, usually more concerned with the world's health than their own. A little exercise can do them the world of good.

PISCES
Feb. 19 - March 20

Pleasure-ruled signs can be so emotional that they are driven to shy habits of escape. The watery Pisceans are known for their drinking or drug problems.

This sign finds it difficult to accept reality and maybe that's why ankles, feet and toes are associated with this sensitive sign.

Reflexology, all forms of massage and swimming will help keep mind and body in tune.

A Geneva mother accidentally discovers the secret to losing weight without dieting

A simple "trick" helped her to lose 6 pounds a week

You too, she says, can easily succeed without medication or exercise. And full details are all yours FREE.*

GENEVA - There are many methods and diets that are claims to be successful in helping you to lose weight. But do you know anyone who has lost all those extra pounds, at a rate of 6 pounds a week, by eating real meals and without dieting, taking medication or exercising?

I do. Mrs. Danielle Chevalier, a Geneva mother, did it. Her secret? She discovered it by accident.

I interviewed Mrs. Chevalier to find out her secret.

Question - Mrs. Chevalier, tell us how you did it?

Answer - Like many other women, I gain weight very easily. When I found out that this weight gain was unhealthy and that I was harming my relationship with my husband, I began to worry.

I tried everything. From rigorous diets to cutting down no food, but this only made me edgy and run-down and the few pounds I had lost in 1 month, I gained back in 7 days.

One day, I read in a newspaper's book where a doctor stated that anyone could lose weight easily and without being deprived of food. His advice was so simple that, at first, I didn't believe it.

Question - But you tried it anyway?

Answer - Yes. But later on. Exactly 3 days after I tried it, I fit into a pair of pants that I hadn't been able to wear in a long time. I told my friends about it. They all laughed. They didn't believe me when I told them that I wasn't on any diet and that I could eat as much as I liked.

Answer - 10 pounds in all. Look at me now. I feel better, my husband finds me attractive and my children are proud of me.

Question - Can your "secret" work for other women?

Answer - Many of my friends did the same thing I did. They lost 5 to 6 pounds a week.

Question - Can you summarize your "secret"?

Answer - Certainly. You can get a full, detailed "Discovery Summary" by mail, free with no obligation to buy anything.

- No restrictions! You can eat cakes, cookies, candies, drink wine or alcohol. And you still lose 5 to 6 pounds a week!

Question - Does the press that mentioned it are impressed?

Answer - Well, yes. Two people. I received nice compliments, except the reporters from and the announcement. I told about that in my report. It's very important. I also call about a lot of other things that I have learned, through personal experience and which will be profitable to anyone who needs to lose a few pounds very fast.

Question - How much does your "Discovery Summary" cost?

Answer - Nothing. When I announced it, I would have given a fortune to find out how to lose weight while eating and drinking all I want. But my "Discovery Summary" doesn't cost you a cent. It's simply free and available to anyone who asks for it. That's good, isn't it?

AIDS SHOCKER!

Woman injects herself with dying boyfriend's tainted blood

A beautiful Frenchwoman named "Marianne" stunned the world when she injected herself with blood from her AIDS-infected boyfriend so they could share death as they had shared life.

Now the 41-year-old woman has come forward to tell her story — and to proclaim proudly the love that will one day kill her.

By MATRICE DENTER
(Correspondent)

"I don't know how much longer I'm going to live," says the pretty blonde, who has been diagnosed with full-blown AIDS.

"I have always loved life, but the idea of losing my man is overwhelming.

"I don't want to struggle anymore. With Angelo I have spent the most wonderful years of my life and I don't want to be in this world without him."

Marianne — who agreed to speak to a reporter only if her real name was not used — met her beloved Angelo in Paris, where she works as a clothing designer.

The darkly handsome Italian, 31, fell madly in love with her and the two began living together.

When Angelo developed a drug problem, the couple separated for a time — but news that he had contracted AIDS had Marianne back at his side again immediately.

In the following months she cared for her dying lover with tenderness and devotion, but as the days passed a shocking idea formed in her mind. So that she would not be left alone when he died, she would die with him.

"I thought constantly of death," Marianne recalled. "I loved Angelo and I couldn't conceive of existence without him.

"The idea of dying with the man I loved more than life itself was always with me. I began making plans to die.

"One day I told Angelo what I wanted to do. He became pale with rage, but I didn't give up. I used everything I had to persuade him. I didn't want to live any longer, and he knew that if he didn't help me I would find some other way to kill myself."

With Angelo's reluctant help the couple removed a drop of blood from Angelo's diseased veins and injected it into her arm. A few months later, the Frenchwoman was told she had AIDS and — like the man she adores — will soon die a horrifying death.

But although she admits she is afraid, Marianne says she doesn't regret what she did.

"I injected myself with Angelo's blood in order to follow him in death," the AIDS victim says now. "It was for me a supreme act of love."

MARIANNE'S lover boyfriend Angelo is dying of AIDS.

"I don't know how much longer I will live," says Marianne.

My wife's an old buddy but she thinks she's a young chick!

Dear Dotti: My 53-year-old wife is going through her second childhood and it's driving me up a wall. She used to be so responsible and solid but now she acts like a 16-year-old kid and dresses like a bum.

She listens to heavy-metal rock music day and night, says things like "awesome" and "rad" all the time and I've even begun to suspect that she's smoking marijuana. What can I do to get my "real" wife back?
— Worried in Kansas

Dear Worried: If your wife reminds me of my teenager, I suggest you read her like one. Restrict the keys to her car, put her on a weekly allowance and maybe her do all the chores around the house. If she gives you any back talk, whip her soundly little fanny. She'll grow up in no time!

My brat wants to leave school and rule his life

Dear Dotti: My son will be a senior in high school next year and I'm worried that he may not graduate. He's smart and popular and all that. But he spends hours like the playgo and barely gets by with C and D grades. Even worse, he's constantly begging me to let him quit school. What can I do to get him on track, Dotti? He says graduating from high school won't be important because he can get a job any time he wants. — Concerned in Atlanta

Dear Concerned: If you really want your son to grow up, let him quit school and go to work. Maybe then he'll get his head straightened out and beg his rich friend [illegible] to get him a job. Only then will he realize how important a high school diploma is and go back to school.

Unfazed by the denial, Dr. del Rosario produced a picture of a nurse, whom he refused to identify, tending to the alien as he lay recovering in the iron lung.

And he continued to insist that U.S. soldiers helicoptered the creature to his clinic north of Zamboanga, the Philippines, after he crashed his spaceship and was shot up as wandered inland in the Sulu Archipelago on June 20.

The physician went on to say that five uniformed men — two of them wielding handguns — ordered him to empty his office and prepare to treat "a VIP."

"When they brought the alien in on a stretcher I was speechless, absolutely stunned," said Dr. del Rosario. "I demanded to know more about the patient but the American soldiers told me to 'shut up and save his worthless life'."

Dr. del Rosario said the creature had a broken arm and bullets in his left leg and chest. He didn't have a pulse, he added, "but that didn't surprise me because I couldn't find his heart.

"I set the arm, removed the bullets and put him in the iron lung because I don't have access to a modern respirator and he was gasping for breath," said the doctor.

"It was all I could do."

Dr. del Rosario said he then hooked the alien up to a heart monitor, inserted a tube down his throat to help him breathe and gave him a shot of penicillin to prevent infection.

"I was afraid to give him anything else because I didn't know what kind of reaction he would have to medicine," he said.

Dr. del Rosario said he then stabilized the alien's vital signs and had him transported by helicopter to the clinic where the iron lung was located.

"I was told by the soldiers that the alien was found in a crashed spacecraft," said Dr. del Rosario.

"They refused to say where they were taking the creature but Dr. del Rosario claims to have overheard the soldiers saying that the alien "was ejected at a facility in Manila" later that day.

"While I was dressing his wounds I heard the soldiers say that a Green Beret unit on operations witnessed the crash of his UFO and shot him as he climbed out of the wreckage.

"They didn't give an exact location but they mentioned the Sulu Archipelago," he said. The Sulus are a string of tiny, uninhabited islands just south of the Philippines proper.

"There's no telling what they're going to do with the alien," added the doctor. "I can only hope that they continue to give him the medical treatment he needs and

CHIMP GETS HIS PALM READ

Psychic promises him a long life

. . . and lots of bananas!

By DICK DONOVAN
Staff writer

Amazing British fortune-teller Bettina Luxton the challenge of her lifetime when she entered a cage in the London Zoo — to read the palm of a chimpanzee!

And while she didn't see a Tarzan lurking in Jonni, the chimp's future, Bettina did clearly see that the 5-year-old critter will live a long and vigorous life.

"His strong head like intelligent great intelligence," Bettina said. "His intelligence is extended showing that he will live a long life and enjoy lots of tasty bananas.

"His heart line, too, is long which indicates to me he possesses great vitality and a terrific personality. All in all, Jonni is truly a wonderful little animal."

The big problem Bettina faced was not just in getting Jonni to stick out his mitt, but to make him sit still long enough for Bettina to read the lines.

"It's all there on his palm. Not one to stand for any monkey business, Bettina solved both problems by giving Jonni what he loves more than anything else in the world — a banana.

"It's incredible," she gasped as she stared down in the lines crisscrossing the chimp's palm.

"He has life, heart and head lines just like we do."

Britain's young Prince William, a little monkey in his own right, also had his fortune told by Bettina, who used a photo of the little wiseguy's palm prints made when he was just 3 weeks old.

"He will be clever and artistic and will take his bride from outside the royal family," she said, adding that the Prince will ascend to the throne in about 2035.

The study couldn't explain right back when things go wrong — and it's better for them, he added.

"People who react by acting up and collecting [illegible] attitude tend to do much better," said Dr. Tobin. "It's a good sign for an elderly person to be a little crabby or hard to handle," he said.

Texas housewife's shocking confession:

I BECAME A HOOKER — TO BUY MY HUBBY A NEW LIVER!

By SCOTTY PAUL

A housewife knew she couldn't afford a new liver for her ailing hubby, so she's earning money to pay for it — by working as a high-priced hooker!

My dear husband doesn't know what I've been doing. I told him I am working as a private nurse's aide for an elderly gentleman [illegible] who asked that we [illegible]

I love him more than life itself and I'll do whatever it takes to make him well. [illegible] I've been working as [illegible] my hands have been dyed.

I had never worked [illegible] while. Frank had always [illegible] the two of us and we didn't think of asking [illegible] the age [illegible]

But when Frank's physician told him he [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

After a month or so she met another hooker who told her about one of the most popular madams in town. "I looked up [illegible] and after that she [illegible]

Global trivia contains a world of surprises

Japanese women live longer, Hungarians kill themselves more and Venezuelans are maniacs behind the wheel.

These are some of the facts from the latest United Nations World Health Organization survey on death rates.

And deaths linked to air pollution total 1.9 million a year in industrialized countries alone.

The survey showed that in Japan, women live an average of 82.5 years and men 78 years. That compares with 74.8 years for women in the U.S. and 71.0 years for American men.

In Europe, France and Switzerland men live the longest, [illegible] Sweden. The U.S. death rate from cancer is 184.9 per 100,000 people, compared with 245.5 in Czechoslovakia and 107.8 in Israel.

Hungary leads the suicide race with an average of 48 per 100,000 followed by Sri Lanka with 30.1, Finland with 27.5 and the former West Germany with 23.8.

Venezuela had the highest death rate for road accidents — 33.1 per 100,000, followed by Portugal and New Zealand. Britain with 4.6 road deaths per the lowest.

Beavers have to chew wood — or die!

Shortly after they are born, beavers glue themselves to a surface and stay in that one place for life. The reluctant they are to find themselves in their permanent, watery address. The carpenter builds his home complete with indoor is stronger than any glue plumbing. The underground dwelling has a separate chamber off the bedroom that serves as a bathroom and drains into the ground away from the living quarters.

There and other little facts are revealed in Elephants Don't Jump and Other Freaky Facts About Animals by Barbara Seuling.

A beaver must chew wood every day or its teeth would grow so long it would not be able to eat and it would starve to death. One beaver chews down hundreds of trees in a year.

Snow flees — which live 20,000 feet above sea level in the Himalayas — freeze solid each night, when the temperature drops, and thaw out the next day.

Elephants can't jump. Although they have the same bones in their feet as other animals, theirs are more closely packed giving them more of the flexibility or spring mechanism that enables others to jump.

The bald eagle builds and adds onto a nest until it is about 12 feet deep and 8½ feet wide — about the same size as the average child's room.

Just when you thought you couldn't laugh any more, Borge teams with the very funny Sakura Azumi to Borge's piano interpretation of the four hand "Jinx Rhapsody by Pfaul." Even the piano can't stay still. You won't believe your ears when you hear Victor perform all the vocal parts in his "Italian Opera" based on the world's silliest plot. His "Inflationary Language" brings the hilarity to an even higher level, which can only be topped by the wild and zany "Phonetic Punctuation" which Borge uses to close this laugh marathon.

BEAST SWALLOWS INFANT WHOLE!

LIVE BABY CUT FROM GATOR'S BELLY

By MICKEY McGUIRE
Special correspondent

Because a camper made a "chance-in-a-million" rescue, a 2-month-old girl is still alive and kicking — after being eaten by an alligator!

Tiny Naoma Majewski was snatched from her makeshift hammock and swallowed whole by a half-blind, hunger-crazed reptile that stormed into a campsite in Florida's Everglades.

In the wink of an eye, the 12-foot-long gator raised its massive head and practically inhaled the helpless infant and the hammock with a single gulp.

"All I could do was stand there screaming for someone to help my baby," 19-year-old Karla later recalled. "I kept thinking, 'This can't real. This can't be happening.' Then I don't have passed out because that's all I remember."

Karla's screams awakened camper Joel Andrews who was sleeping in his nearby tent. He grabbed his gun and dashed to where Karla lay sprawled on the ground.

"When I got there, I saw that Karla was not like a light," Andrews later recalled. "I looked around and saw the gator just laying about 10 yards away. Its eyes looked funny. Karla looks like it had its mouth partially open and I could see a piece of rag was caught on a tooth. Then I saw the torn hammock.

"I thought, 'My God! It got the kid!' Right away I realized the piece of rag was part of the hammock. I ran over and shot the damn thing in the head with my .41 Magnum.

"I knew the odds were like one chance in a million that the kid could still be alive. But I had to try," Andrews said.

"So I flipped the gator on its back and slit its belly open. That's what saved her from the gator's digestive juices.

"The gator was an old male that probably couldn't hunt because it was almost totally blind. It was starving and that baby was the first meal it'd had in a long time."

By the time Andrews had little Naoma safe and sound, Karla had revived. She became hysterical with joy when she took her baby in her arms.

"MY HERO!" That's what tiny Naoma Majewski would say if she could talk. Mom Karla relieved Joel Andrews, above, cradling the lucky tot as grateful mom (l.) gets look-see, moments after he cut her from a gator's stomach.

Here's the hero who saved tiny girl's life

Your favorite flower reveals your personality

Roses are red, violets are blue and your favorite flower tells a lot about you!

So says Dr. Elayne Kahn, co-author of the book Just Ways We Are, According to Dr. Kahn: How Flowers Reveal Your Personality.

Here's what you're like if romantic flowers, or if they're your favorite, you're a romantic. You love flowers and dinner by candlelight.

Roses — Roses are the most beautiful flowers in creation, and if you love their exotic, delicate beauty — despite their high cost — it shows you're willing to spend lavishly for the finer things in life.

Since orchids are the traditional "prom night" flowers, if you favor them you're also a person who likes nostalgia.

Carnations — This is a poor man's rose, a flower for someone who doesn't believe in wasting money on frills, Dr. Kahn said. You don't like fancy clothes or fancy foods. You relate well to everyone, and when giving, you believe it's the thought, not the money, that counts.

Gladioli — These are big flowers, so if you favor them it shows you like things that make a "big splash." You go out of your way to be noticed. The Christmas gift you give is always the largest. You also favor high fashion.

Daisies — You can always depend upon finding daisies in a flower shop, and if you like them best, you're a dependable person. You're always on time and expect others to be. You try never ever to break your promises.

DANGEROUS ROBERT CORWEN drinks heavily before driving.

DRUNK DRIVER IS PROUD OF HIS 134 SMASH-UPS!

By FRANK Di PIETRO
Correspondent

Doomsday drunk driver Robert Corwen [redacted] caused 134 car accidents so far — and he vows never to stop drinking and driving! "You just can't beat the feeling of being drunk and hitting another car," crazed motorist Corwen tells. "Maybe someday I will get to know the feeling of killing someone while drunk."

Maiming other motorists is his hobby!

Corwen, 43, has tickets and warrants out for him in more than a dozen towns all across Wales. After every few accidents, he moves.

As a long-distance truck driver, Corwen can always find work and choose his routes.

"I drive all day for a living. When I get off work, I want to smash all those blimpin' drivers I see on the roadways," he says.

Corwen said he agreed to talk to The NEWS because he wants to know if there is anyone else in the world with a record number of drunk-driving accidents anywhere near his smashing 134. "There's no record book I can go look something like this up.

"Truck drivers talk a lot on the road, but I've never heard of anybody who can touch this score," he said proudly.

Bryan Woods, a fellow truck dr. says he and other truckers are very aware of Corwen's drinking-and-driving record.

"He hates everybody. He's an angry drunk. Instead of picking fights in the pub, he waits until he gets behind the wheel."

[redacted] of his car-crashing [redacted] and [redacted] he is a [redacted] he would drink and drive right away.

"My dad always hated me out of the two as I never got any tickets and never lost my license," he recalls.

"When I got on my own, I was already hooked.

"It feels great to go roaring down the roadway and take out a Rolls or Jaguar. Gone, I hate big cars."

Aside from a few bumps and bruises, Corwen says he's never been hurt in any of his accidents. "Being falling down drunk helps," he says.

"But I have got lots of people in the hospital. They don't see me running out of the cars, and if I catch them outa just right, I can do a lot of damage." Corwen says he pays old punishers far less than $300.

"They hand up pretty well," he says. "I can get rich, motor-lawyer stays, good punch-ups out of a jumbo before it's time to get a new one.

"Adapt it," Corwen argues. "I'm just doing what everyone would like to do."

For a healthier, happier life

GET FAT AS A PIG!

By RICK TRACY
Special correspondent

A blue-ribbon panel of Swedish doctors has concluded that most people would enjoy healthier, happier and longer lives if they stopped looking at food as the enemy — and weighed 30 percent more.

"People worry themselves into an early grave trying to keep in step with society's code that 'thin is in,'" Dr. Olof Andersson told colleagues at the Stockholm convention.

"Well, our studies show that fat means fit."

A survey of more than 700 people of all sexes and ages by Dr Andersson and colleague Dr. Orio Sjoden revealed that those who purposely packed on 30 percent more pounds had a more normal blood pressure, heartbeat and pulse than those who didn't.

"Of 60 men and women in the 50 and older age bracket who increased their weight by 30 percent within the last year, all are still alive," Dr Sjoden reported.

"And I might add, they feel better about themselves. But of the 60 people in the same age group who either lost weight or stayed the same, have passed on, three heart disease or respiratory problems."

The dietary experts also concluded that people who go on and off diets like a yo-yo have significantly more emotional problems than people who shun diets.

"You need to have a healthy emotional relationship with food," said Dr. Andersson.

"Food should be your friend.

"Don't tell me those anorexic-looking fashion models you're hungry and stop when it's uncomfortable to bend over and put on your socks or tie your shoestrings," said Dr Sjoden. "To sit with friends and family and enjoy a fine dinner is what life is all about. And while you're at it — reward yourself with a generous slice of pie at your eating mill and to your satisfaction won't hurt a bit."

...dieting and SMILE, says world-

...ese people in magazines are healthier than women with a little blubber hugging at their bones," he added.

"We have totally ignored the possibility that undernourishing is bad for you," Dr Andersson said.

Fat folks also are more able to cope with modern-day pollutions that cause sickness and death, according to Swedish scientist Dr Jacques Joseph-son.

Thick layers of fat absorb damaging poisons such as lead and pesticides, preventing them from reaching the blood, said Dr Josephson, who has gone from 176 to 231 pounds in six months.

"What is regarded as abnormal padding actually works like a filter and allows the poisons to be broken down gradually, reducing the damage potential," he said.

"I've never felt better in my life," said Dr Josephson.

"I see many of my skinny friends going down with heart attacks but I'm still puffing along — and enjoying delicious meals in bed!"

Getting off the diet merry-go-round won't be easy, the experts concluded, because of the prevalence of anxiety in the West.

The world's biggest dieting hoax has been ending handcuffed and mutilated Barbie dolls to patients in hospitals and mental health wards.

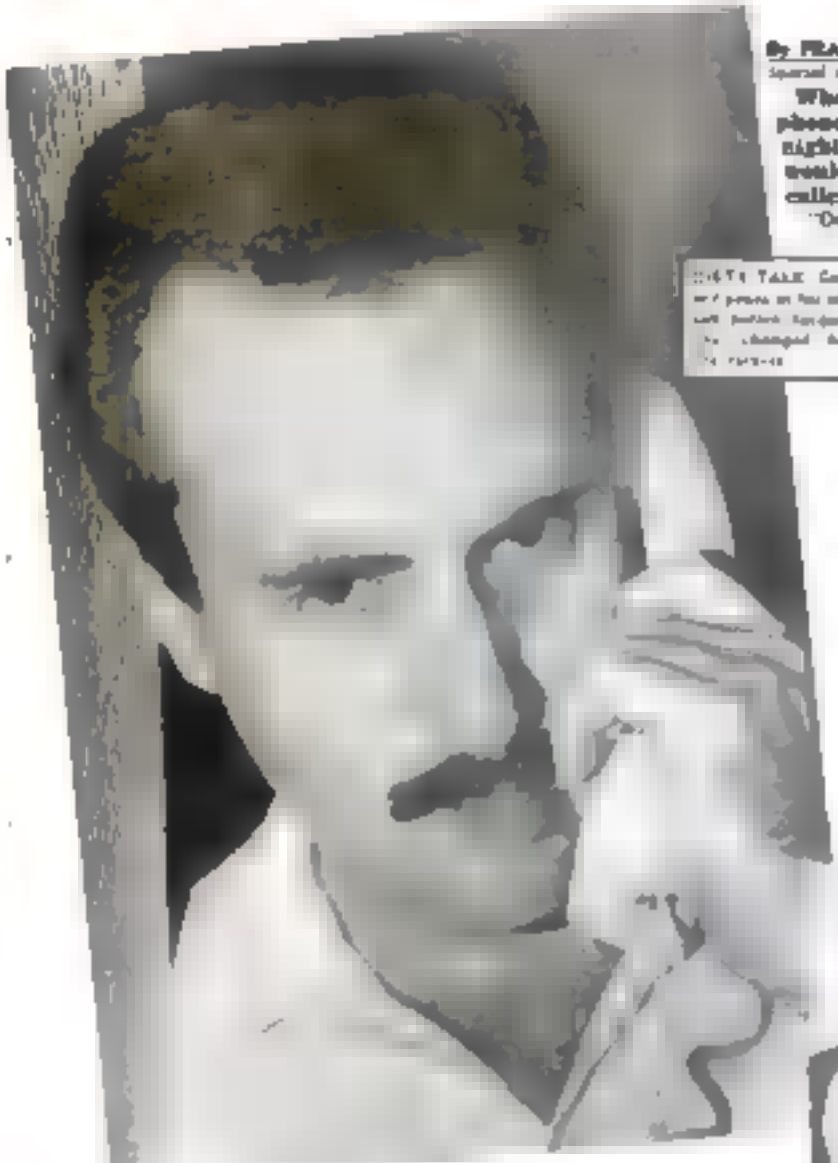
OBSCENE PHONE CALLS HIS



By FRANK [illegible]
Special to The NEWS

When a sexy secretary got filthy phone calls at all hours of the night, she never dreamed she would marry the foulmouthed caller.

"Our romance began with heavy breathing and ended at the altar," said newlywed Jacqueline Desmond as she and her hubby Gerard left their home in Paris, France, for a short honeymoon.

Jacqueline at first didn't think anything of wedding bells a year ago when her phone rang in the dead of night and she answered it.

"The man was breathing into the phone and whispering about things he would like to do with me in bed. I was terrified and hung up," she said.

A week later Jacqueline was awakened from a sound sleep by the same dirty prank. "He said he had been watching me every move and would be seeing me soon."

Jacqueline called police, who put a tap on her phone. She didn't have long to wait. "He called again the next night. The police had told me to talk to him, keep him on the phone," she said.

"It was a scary conversation. My heart was pounding and my knees were shaking as the filth poured out of the mouth. He said things to me that I could never repeat."

Less than an hour later cops burst into the small apartment of Gerard Blanton and arrested him for making the obscene calls.

Gerard, 26, admitted making the calls and apologized profusely in letters to Jacqueline. "I have prayed to God that you will forgive me," he wrote.

"He sounded so pitiful and sincere I decided to visit him in jail," Jacqueline said. "He wasn't at all what I thought he

Salt addict takes fatal overdose!

In one of the world's most bizarre deaths, a young student gulped salt by the spoonful and even snorted the stuff — until it killed him

Mark Whitling's stomach couldn't retain the salt he craved. Even down a drip-line straight. A student who a raving fanatic who thought he was a second Jesus Christ.

A rare but treatable ailment called Leighs disease caused his deadly appetite for salt, pathologist Dr. Margaret Chappell testified at an inquest in Southend, England.

The disease had destroyed the part of Mark's brain which regulates the amount of salt needed in the body.

Mark, 21, was a bright 17-year-old looking forward to college when he developed the dread disease probably because he had so much sodium in his blood, said Dr. Chappell.

He became psychotic, shaved his hair off and believed he was the second son of Christ who was getting messages from a penguin called Boris. After being admitted to a mental hospital Mark wandered the wards naked and constantly demanded salt from nurses.

He finally died of kidney failure after years of hostility those of salt had made his kid have to go with Dr. Chappell.

Mark's brain was sent to the Institute of Psychiatry where the rare disease was diagnosed after his death.

Coroner Dr. Ian Jarman said Mark probably would still be alive if he hadn't taken to such salt.

Leighs disease is so rare that Dr. Chappell hadn't heard of it before.

A former attorney says the United States government could do the country a big favor by paying lawyers $500,000 each — to quit practicing law!

How to tell if someone is going crazy

You can recognize the onset of mental illness in someone close to you by keeping an eye out for seven clues, say experts.

An unexpected change in behavior is the big tip-off that a friend, relative or co-worker is suffering emotional problems and may need professional help, said psychiatrist Daniel Peters.

The change may be abrupt or it may be gradual. "But in either case, you may feel he or she isn't the same person you have known all along," explained psychiatrist Barry Friedman.

1. A person who is usually energetic acts tired and indifferent. The person may complain about being fatigued. His work may be neglected, and he doesn't seem to care.

2. A previously polite and caring person suddenly becomes suspicious.

"Manners and social etiquette often fall apart during mental illness," noted Dr. Friedman.

"Words like 'please' and 'thank you' may disappear from the person's vocabulary, and he or she may act rude."

3. A person who usually controls his alcohol or drug intake seems unwell.

"When someone with no history of alcohol or drug abuse begins to abuse these substances, it can be a sign of mental illness. And drug abuse doesn't necessarily have to mean illegal drugs — it also can mean prescription drugs," Dr. Friedman said.

4. A person who usually maintains stable relationships starts to develop difficulty with important ones.

The person may have trouble dealing with people on the job — and also with his or her spouse. He or she may resort to physical or emotional abuse that may veil or threaten, said Dr. Peters.

5. A person with emotions in the normal range becomes dependent or shows rapid shifts in mood.

The person may begin to have rapid shifts in emotions — going from eager to playfulness, from sadness to giggles.

6. A previously decisive person has trouble making decisions.

"Even the smallest decisions, like choosing clothes, become difficult," declared Dr. Friedman.

7. A person with good hygiene develops poor hygiene.

His or her clothes may be inappropriate, dirty or unpressed. Often the person may wear the same clothes for days.

Added Dr. Friedman:

"Remember, just one of these changes doesn't necessarily indicate mental illness — but if there's a pattern of changes, it's likely the person needs professional help."

TWO BODIES ONE MIND

By JACK ALEXANDER

Incredible twins Freda and Greta Chaplin are so remarkably alike in every way imaginable, they seem like two sisters with a single mind.

Twin sisters eat, dress & behave EXACTLY alike

"We feel like we're one person, not two," they said in unison, sounding like a slightly out-of-synch stereo.

One look at the world's oddest couple and you'd swear you were seeing double, and retired engineer Jack Davenport, who took the twins into his home in London, England.

Their hairstyles are in precise synchronization when they wash. And they brush their teeth at exactly the same time and pace.

They eat the exact same portions of food in identical style for both of the same meals.

They spend two hours a day bathing each other, going through 10 bars of soap a week.

They dress identically down to their underclothes and wear their hair alike, watching each other instead of looking at a mirror as they do it.

The twins are perfectly happy together but if separated — [illegible] — they become [illegible] depressed and run around in circles. If one gets sick the other one also goes to bed.

They wear the same size shoes even though their feet aren't the same size.

When they pour tea for a host or help the [illegible] both must have their hand on the teapot, the sugar or cream handle.

"I have never seen anything quite like them," said [illegible] psychologist George [illegible] of the University of Stirling in Scotland.

He suggests one of the twins was born with a psychological problem which was copied by the other one.

"They have been so alike for such a long time. It would be difficult to find out who started their obsessive behavior," said Prof. Butterworth.

Their parents dressed the two of them exactly alike, discouraged them from making friends and allowed them each to have one toy — [illegible] dolls.

The sisters weren't even allowed to call each other by name.

They were simply called "twin" — a name they still use for each other today.

Their mother once told them to always buy two of everything and make sure they are exactly alike.

So when a social worker bought them different colored bars of soap years later, they burst into tears. They refused to use the soap until both bars were cut in two and shared between them.

The twins seem comfortable living with Davenport, and may never lead normal lives. But they do have each other.

"They're not hurting anybody. They just seem to be allowed to exist in the way that makes them happy," Davenport said.

"Really, that's not asking much, is it?"

Study links premarital sex with bad behavior in kids

Youngsters who engage in early sex are more likely to have serious behavioral problems.

An intense study of boys and girls ages 13 through 18 found that 52 percent of the boys and 36 percent of the girls had had sexual intercourse at least once.

Compared with virgins, sexually-active girls were 2.8 times more likely to have used alcohol, 4.2 times more likely to have smoked pot and 4.9 times more likely to have attempted suicide.

Boys who engaged in premarital sex were 2.8 times more likely to have used alcohol, 6.3 times more likely to have smoked pot and 2.7 times more likely to have been arrested or picked up by the police than boys who had not had sex.

Raging lion breaks into mobile home and mauls granny & child, 5!

By SUSAN JIMISON
Staff Writer

ANDERSON, S.C. — Little Julie Holbrooks, 5, and her grandmom were watching TV in their trailer when a 250-pound lion bounded in the door and mauled them both, police say.

The little girl was bitten on the throat and chest and grandmother, Shirley Holbrooks, 46, was bitten on the hand, according to authorities.

"The girl and her grandmother were hysterical," said Chief Deputy Mike Temple of the Anderson County Sheriff's office. Fortunately, the animal's owner heard the commotion in the trailer, rushed over and captured the lion.

He took it home, got it in its cage and shot it. He told us he never had a problem with the animal before."

Chief Temple said the lion had been raised from childhood by its owner, Tony Allen. Allen used to take the animal for rides in his pickup truck, the Chief said.

The lion was kept securely caged, but at the sight of the attack victims had pried the lock open and released the animal, according to Chief Temple.

The lion wandered into a neighboring trailer park and bit little Julie and her grandmother. Chief Temple said the girl had eight stitches and was kept overnight for observation. The grandmother was treated and released.

Both of them are going to have rabies shots just to be safe, he said.

Gulp! Boy, 3, swallows frog

DOCTOR'S assistant points to spot where frog lodged.

The mother of a gluttonous 3-year-old boy is hoping her little toddler never gets another frog in his throat — because the last one had to be removed by a surgeon!

The "frog" in this case wasn't a real creature. Nor was it the kind many of us get when we're talking.

This perky critter was one of those little metal toys that click like castanets when squeezed.

Seems the boy popped the tiny toy in his mouth and swallowed it. The frog became lodged in his windpipe.

Fearing the tot might croak if the frog wasn't quickly removed, the boy was rushed to the hospital where a surgeon deftly retrieved it.

By RICK DONOVAN
Staff writer

The boy is now back with his relieved parents in Perth, Australia, where all playthings small enough to be swallowed have been put out of his reach.

Fish-face fad sweeping Germany!

By RICK TRACY
Special correspondent

Folks might think you're nuts to walk around wearing a water-filled diving mask with fish swimming around inside — but that's the wacky fad sweeping Germany.

"No one knows how it started, but it certainly has caught on," said Franz Giesdorf, a college student from Berlin. Giesdorf, 20, admits you can get a bit cross-eyed watching the little critters wiggle back and forth, "but it sure is an awesome gettter, especially with women."

Pet stores say they are swamped with demands for goldfish. Dive shops long ago depleted their normal supply of scuba diving masks.

"I've never seen anything like it," said Heinz Specht, who runs an aquatic store in a Berlin suburb. "I've raised my prices three times."

The goofy craze has become so popular that laws banning the masks from restaurants, classrooms and while driving on public roads have been necessary.

"These young kids are supposed to be intelligent, but they've gone batty over this fad and have become a menace on the highways," said Police Sgt. Helmut Franz.

But the biggest blast has come from animal rights activists, who say the craze is heartless and sadistic.

"These weirdos are playing with the lives of helpless little fish just to show off and perhaps get a few laughs," said Anna Ludwig.

"When the fish die for lack of care in feeding, they are tossed in a trash can. It's cruel and disgusting."

"I don't know what all the fuss is about," Giesdorf said. "I take care of my fish. I change the water several times a day. But I must admit they're becoming a bit of a nuisance. They nibble my nose."

Animal rights activist Mrs. Ludwig would like to see them change the species of fish in the mask. "I would suggest they try piranhas," she said.

WATER-FILLED mask helps this college kid keep one eye on his pet goldfish.

33-FT.-LONG PREHISTORIC CROC FOUND ALIVE IN AFRICA!

By ROSS GRADY
Special to The NEWS

KINSHASA, Zaire — A team of scientists has made the greatest zoological discovery of the century — they captured a crocodile believed to be extinct for millions of years!

The 33-foot-long, prehistoric beast was tranquilized, then netted as it basked on the muddy bank of the Lomami River.

"We were working in the village of Wali and kept hearing outlandish tales of monstrous crocodiles that lived several miles downstream," explained Swedish botanist Dr. Sture Talleksen.

"My colleagues scoffed at the stories. Nothing like that has lived since the days of the dinosaurs. But I decided to take a look. I really believed I was just looking for an excuse to get away from the village for a few hours. Nothing could have prepared me for what I saw in the jungle that day. There on the bank of the river were three of the largest living reptiles I had ever seen.

"I quickly returned to the village and told the others what I had seen. At first they thought it was a joke, but they soon realized that I was deadly serious.

"I and four of my colleagues — Dr. Hans Stern, Dr. Byron Kappie, Dr. Wilhelm Olsen and his wife, Dr. Louise Olsen — arrived at the site just at daybreak.

"Two of the monsters were lying on the bank while five others lay motionless in the water. We decided to try to capture one of those in the river.

"Dr. Kappie injected a dead pig with a powerful tranquilizer and put it in the river about 100 yards upstream. One of the crocs swallowed it in one gulp. We then made our way downstream about 300 yards beyond where the crocodiles were and waited. In an hour, the one that ate the pig floated by and we snagged it with a net."

Dr. Talleksen said the croc is now being transported in a special tank that will keep it alive until it reaches a marine research center in Sweden.

Mom grows head of lettuce on her

By MICHAEL TODD
Special correspondent

Housewife Anna Lindhaben is a human vegetable garden, a woman whose scalp sprouts lush crops of miniature lettuce that can be harvested and eaten like ordinary produce!

The mother of six from Akrand, Norway, feeds the scalp salad to her family and she swears they love it. The crop appears to be an endless supply.

"I don't know why my scalp grows lettuce and doctors don't either," said Mrs. Lindhaben, who wives the leaves off with a razor, washes and serves them when I planted my vegetable garden in a high wind. I guess the seeds got into my scalp somehow. Anyway, from then on my head's been sprouting like a garden."

When she has a bumper crop of greens growing on her head, Mrs. Lindhaben has to wear a scarf. The heads of lettuce grow from every part of her head, but most develop along the top and back of the crest of leaves (the roots and stem to harvest. How it's impossible for her to comb or brush it, she says.

"When this first started happening to me I was terribly upset and I went from doctor to doctor trying to get help," she recalled in a magazine article about her bizarre ailment. "I just couldn't believe what was happening to me.

High school beauty's biggest night turns out to be her last!

MURDERED beauty Berlyn Cayman was a basketball standout on her school team.

By JACK ALEXANDER
Staff writer

Pretty tomboy Berlyn Cayman got all dolled up for her high school prom with a new green evening gown and a trip to the beauty parlor to style her long brown hair.

An all-star basketball player, the 5-foot-8 beauty and 14 friends rented a limousine to take them to the prom and rented rooms for an after-the-dance party in an Anaheim, Calif., hotel.

It was to be the biggest night in her young life before going to a Missouri college on a four-year athletic scholarship.

But it turned out to be the last night of her life.

The sleeping beauty was shot to death as she lay on a couch, allegedly by former football hero Paul Crowder, 19, police said.

"She apparently was the innocent victim of an obnoxious drunk who had been waving a pistol around all evening until it went off. She was in the wrong place at the wrong time," said Police Sgt. Chet Harry.

ALLEGED killer Paul Crowder

Crowder, who dated one of the victim's basketball teammates, has been charged with Berlyn's murder and jailed without bail.

"Crowder had been threatening to shoot the pistol and brandished it throughout the night," Sgt. Harry said with reason told him.

"The shooting was the culmination of how being obnoxious."

After the bizarre shooting, Crowder ran from the hotel and phoned his mother, who picked him up.

Cops later arrested him at home.

Berlyn was a brown-haired beauty who averaged 20 points a game for Crescenta Valley High.

She lived and breathed basketball and could often be found at one of the neighborhood parks playing pickup basketball games with the boys.

"She would go to school, race home, change into shorts and a sweatshirt and I wouldn't see her till dark," said her heartbroken father, Mark Cayman.

"Berlyn was the most competitive, intense person I've ever seen on any basketball court.

"She ate, she slept and survived basketball," said Berlyn's high school coach, Scott Rossum.

"She liked to do what other girls in California like," her father said, "going to the beach, playing volleyball, but most of all you could find her at one of the parks around here playing basketball with the boys."

But as her high school career came to an end, friends said basketball seemed to take a backseat to the prom in Berlyn's mind.

"She was so excited about the prom, she could hardly walk," said a classmate.

"It was a senseless shooting," said Sgt. Harry.
